In his history has this quiet little town of 2000 people been so ablaze in glory as it was tonight. Ordinarily the citizens retire for the night by 9 o'clock, At 10 o'clock it is as quiet as a country churchyard is at midnight. There is nothing like with which to compare the stillness that prevails.

But tonight was different. W. J. Bryan, leader of the Democratic national campaign, a native of the place, returned here. The whole town was out to meet him. There were sky reciters and Roman candles, red fire was burning all along the route by which Mr. Bryan was conducted to the home of his sister. He rill remain for the next two days. When the train pulled up to the Sa-
